Jens Bischof

CEO Eurowings

Jens Bischof has been the President of the German Aviation Association (BDL) since July 2024. The experienced aviation manager has been leading the airline Eurowings as CEO since March 2020.

After studying business administration in Rendsburg and obtaining his master's degree at McGill in Montreal, Canada, Jens Bischof began his career in the Lufthansa Group in 1990 by joining the cargo subsidiary Lufthansa Cargo. Since then, he has held numerous management positions at Europe's largest airline group. From 2006 to 2011, he was responsible for Lufthansa's passenger business in North and South America. Subsequently, as Lufthansa Passage Board Member and Chief Commercial Officer, he led – inter alia – the global sales organization of the Lufthansa Group Airlines.

In 2017, Jens Bischof was appointed CEO of SunExpress. He handed over the management of the joint venture between Lufthansa and Turkish Airlines three years later with record results. Since 2020, he has been the CEO of Eurowings. Through consistent restructuring, he successfully achieved the economic turnaround of the company under his leadership. At the same time, he successfully advanced the repositioning of Eurowings as the "value airline for Europe".

As a well-connected industry expert, Jens Bischof is a sought-after opinion leader in national and international industry associations. He holds various supervisory board mandates in the aviation and technology sectors and is also supporting start-up companies.

Jens Bischof was born in Frankfurt in 1965, is married, and has two children.
